Keeping children at home

Please find below information from Norwegian Institute of Public Health as a reminder regarding keeping your child at home when they have symptoms of a respiratory tract infection:

Children who have had symptoms of a respiratory tract infection in the last 24 hours should stay at home, especially if the child has several symptoms at the same time and is not feeling well. If the child only has a runny nose and is otherwise in a good general condition, there is no need for the child to stay at home.

If the child has mild respiratory tract symptoms without fever, observe the child at home for up to 48 hours. With rapid recovery, the child can return to childcare / school without being tested for coronavirus. If the child is not recovering after 48 hours, contact a doctor or out-of-hours medical service by phone to assess whether the child needs a medical examination and / or COVID-19 test.

Grade 8 interviews with school nurse

Please find attached a letter from the school nurse regarding interviews with Grade 8 students.
